

Spencer Fane Gains Labor and Employment Attorney in Growing Denver Office

Spencer Fane LLP is pleased to announce Stephanie M. Hiquiana joined the firm's Denver office as an associate in the Labor and Employment practice group.

Stephanie represents companies in employment law matters, carefully navigating obstacles that may lead to disputes and providing full-service coverage through diligent day-to-day counsel, long-term compliance strategies, and, when necessary, fierce litigation.

In addition to her robust employment law practice, Stephanie has represented clients through a wide variety of commercial litigation matters, including equine law disputes.

"We are excited to welcome Stephanie to our strong and collaborative Labor and Employment practice, where she will undoubtedly contribute to the group's exceptional client service standards while providing the legal knowledge to assist our clients in handling and resolving complex issues and disputes," said Ron Fano, Office Managing Partner for Spencer Fane in Denver. "As the Denver office grows, the firm continues to prioritize highly intentional lateral hires that will fulfill our clients' unique needs and align with our core values and culture."

Stephanie received her bachelor's degree from the University of Missouri, then worked as a public relations professional for international healthcare and consumer brands. Later, she earned her Juris Doctor from the Illinois Institute of Technology Chicago-Kent College of Law while completing internships in both the public and private sectors, including serving as a law clerk at the Illinois Attorney General's Office.