Overview

Jim represents clients in a variety of personal injury claims, mass tort actions, environmental matters, product liability suits, Federal Employers Liability Act (FELA) claims, maritime disputes, and other commercial litigation, navigating particularly complex trial work with an acute attention to detail and a comprehensive awareness of all potential risks.

After beginning his legal career in general civil practice, Jim found his niche in courtroom litigation, handling a wide variety of matters in state, federal, and administrative courts for over four decades. He has successfully defended clients in matters ranging from asbestos litigation to landlord-tenant disputes to environmental contamination matters.

Additionally, he has used his well-established skills to represent several large corporations as national counsel, trial counsel, and coordinating counsel in class actions and mass torts. With broad industry insight and extensive experience, Jim regularly lectures at continuing legal education seminars, rehabilitation specialist seminars, and in-house courses for clients.

Notably, Jim was appointed to serve on the U.S. Magistrate Judge Merit Selection Panel in Galveston, Texas, in 2017.
